It's not a weapon! Be very careful not to see off your own head. Your Wii is powered by electricity, not juice. If you have a pacemaker, it will be jealous of Wiimotes. Take care of the health of your Wii, don't let it smoke. Your Wii doesn't require clothing. Good luck charms can interfere with the performance of your Wii. Cables aren't food. Wiimotes don't like your feet. Don't even think about it. Look at the idiot. Don't play with the Wii in the snow. 2006-12-04 14:48:00by Nick Chester0It was a long tradition that warning illustrations and information found inside Japanese electronics manuals should be funny. I believe that this is actually Japanese law. Nintendo hasn't let us down since these scans from Japanese Wii users are so fun to illustrate. Check them out, and no matter what you do, don't stick four sheets of clover in the back of the Wii. It's almost as stupid and dangerous as chewing the cord sensor bar! You're out of the system.
